

2022
ANNUAL REPORT

Dear Friends,

As we reflect on 2022, we're reminded of the journey we've embarked upon over the years, and how this past year has showcased our adaptability and commitment.

We began a century ago with a mission, inspired by Dr. Edgar J. Helms' vision, to provide a "hand up, not a handout." We have used that as our guide to evolve and introduce new opportunities like the Excel Centers, Autism services, and Domestic Violence services.

In 2022, MERS Goodwill stood at the forefront of change. Maintaining our commitment to "Changing lives through the power of work," we focused on expanding our digital outreach. This not only widened our footprint but also ensured that we remained a lifeline for those in need, regardless of geographical boundaries.

As we look ahead, we're filled with gratitude for the continuous support from our donors, shoppers, staff, and board members. We recognize that there's more to be done. With your support, we promise to continue championing our mission, following our Circle of Hope, and remaining a beacon for all in our community.

Here's to changing more lives, one opportunity at a time.

Cordially,

Mark Arens

Goodwill Using Cleared Clutter To Create Jobs

Being snowed in presents the perfect time for everyone in MERS Goodwill's communities to rethink their home organization and help create local jobs at the same time.

All community members are invited to bring the clothing and household items they no longer need to their closest MERS Goodwill donation center so they can find new use with a new family, a budding hobbyist, or a thrifty deal-seeker, said MERS Goodwill CEO and President Dave Kutchback.

Last year, MERS Goodwill received 1,561,256 item donations. With the support of donors, MERS Goodwill programs offer guidance and support to clients seeking stable employment and a brighter future in 2022.

"The donations that MERS Goodwill receives are invaluable to supporting the organization's life-changing programs," Kutchback said. "It's a win-win. MERS Goodwill supporters can clean out their closets and get organized while our shoppers and clients benefit."

The stores assist with funding MERS Goodwill job training and employment services along with four locations of The Excel Center and a MERS Goodwill Career Center.

MISSOURI BUSINESS ALERT, JULY 27, 2022

Columbia thrift stores see increased sales as people turn to secondhand

Sales are up at local thrift stores as customers seek lower prices for items such as clothing and furniture. The secondhand apparel market is set to grow three times as much as the overall apparel market by 2026, with the biggest jump set for this year, according to a report from ThredUP, an online consignment and thrift store. In a 2020 report, ThredUP expected thrifting to be a $64 billion industry by 2025.

More than half of consumers resold some apparel in 2021, and 244 million consumers have shopped secondhand or are willing to, according to survey from data analytics firm GlobalData Consumer Resale. As interest in resale increases, the number of new stores in the industry is growing at about 7% per year, according to The Association of Resale Professionals.

In order to offset rising delivery and supply costs, some thrift stores are looking to cut costs where they can. For instance, thrift store chain Goodwill is reducing waste at checkout.

"If we have to put something in a bag and tape it up, we're trying not to put as much of that out because it takes more time and supplies than it might be worth," said Kelsi Levell, who works at the Goodwill location in Columbia.

Thrift stores in Columbia are expecting sales to jump even more when college students return for the start of the fall semester.

OUTLET STORE

We Sell Remaining Donated Items By The Pound

When donated items are not selected to be sold in stores due to quality, they start the next part of their journey. Those items are loaded on trucks and taken by transportation to the outlet stores. Once they arrive, donations are unloaded and sorted. Customers are able to sift through tens of thousands of items for purchase. Customers come to find items that may be overlooked by stores or sorters to get them at a heavily discounted price. Items at the outlet are sold by the pound.

The Outlet opens for three hours twice a day, 7 days a week; the store is different every time it opens.

The Surging Popularity of Thrift Store Outlets:

Across the country, thrift store outlets are witnessing a dramatic surge in demand. This growth in popularity can be attributed to economic challenges and the influence of social and cultural trendsetters. The pricing by the pound attracts resellers and dedicated thrifters.

Economic Pressures Drive Consumers to Thrift Stores

High inflation rates, among other economic pressures, have drastically altered consumer buying patterns. As prices soar and purchasing power diminishes, consumers are seeking alternative means to maximize the value of every dollar. For many, thrift stores, with their vast inventory of gently used, high-quality products at a fraction of the retail price, offer an attractive solution.

MERS Goodwill takes recycling very seriously. Recycling is an important part of the flow of donations and the circle of hope. This benefits the agency by generating more revenue, and it also reduces waste in the communities they service.

They are recycled in the traditional sense and through partnerships. Recyclable items such as cardboard, plastic, and scrap metal are condensed in a bailer, and sold to local recycling companies that further process the bails to be used in the creation of new products.

A majority of remaining clothing, textiles, and glass items are sold off to one of the many vendors Goodwill has partnered with over the many years. Many cotton products are cut into rags and sold to automotive and hardware locations giving them another life. Glass items are sold to rage rooms, which are recreation locations that allow their customers to smash and break items.

St. Louis resources to help you lead a more eco-friendly and sustainable life.

Earth Day is chock-full of festivals and events where you can learn more about the environment, but there are plenty of resources St. Louis for helping you lead a more eco-friendly and sustainable life the other 364 days of the year. Still, eco anxiety is running high—can one person really make a difference? How can you get started? In celebration of Earth Day, this guide breaks down small ways you can lead a more environmentally friendly and sustainable life.

Avoid fast fashion or shop secondhand.

When speaking about sustainability and how to live a more environmentally friendly life, the topic of fast fashion is bound to arise. Aided by the use of toxic dyes and cheap textiles that are associated with fossil fuels and global warming, and further compounded by the intent to produce large quantities of clothing that reflect current trends, fast fashion results in tremendous waste.

In an age of consumerism, there can be pressure to adapt to new fads and trends that can fluctuate every couple of months. The simplest action that can be taken is wearing what you already own and taking care of your timeless basics. The idea of maintaining a capsule wardrobe relates to this mindset. With a capsule wardrobe, one's closet is composed of interchangeable items. As a result, there are a variety of outfits that can be created. These are often classic pieces that are likely not going out of style anytime soon. When this is done effectively, you don't have to own an excessive number of clothes. Additionally, minimizing the number of items you own might mean you can buy higher-quality pieces, which are usually more environmentally friendly. Locally, at Ardently, for example, 85 percent of merchandise is made of natural or recycled material.

Another way to avoid supporting fast fashion or to give back is by shopping and donating at secondhand clothing stores. Donating to these stores is also a great option. Rather than ending up in a landfill, unwanted clothes are given a new life.

Alexcia, Madi, & Trey Summer Work Experience

Students with our SWE (Summer Work Experience) program in Kennett, MO are working part-time at their host site, HARPS grocery store. Summer job coach, Kayla Snider, helps these students prepare for future jobs and careers.

From stocking shelves to cart retrieval to bagging groceries and customer service, these individuals learn a variety of skills that will help them for many years to come.

Alexcia is learning the cash register, trained by the HARPS Grocery Store Manager, Philip Snider, at our Kennett Summer Work Experience site. She's been offered a part-time position, if she chooses to take it. She has excelled so much in the SWE program.

Madi has blossomed this summer with customer service skills and Trey has worked SWE while also "tackling" his football practice this summer with early morning practices, then coming to work ON TIME each day. Trey has also been offered a position if he chooses to take it but may wait until after football season.

JOB TRAINING

Julian

From Part-Time to Full-Time Employee of The Month

Julian came to MERS Goodwill already working part-time and interested in finding a full-time position with perks like medical benefits.

Julian found Missouri Vocational Rehabilitation and was referred to the MERS Goodwill Career Center in Poplar Bluff for assistance in achieving this goal.

Julian did well in his part-time position in the food industry, and he and his MERS Goodwill employment specialist talked about how he could transfer the skills he had gained over his three years of experience. Julian's drive and support team propelled him toward the next phase of his career. Julian received assistance building his resume and searching for a new job. He also received support from his job coaches, and the career center served as an advocate for him.

Earlier this year, Julian obtained a full-time position with HHS, a contractor of housekeeping services at Poplar Bluff Regional Medical Center. Julian spent time adjusting to the work, including the increased hours and new tasks. He now cleans a designated area in the urgent care/emergency room wing on an 8-hour shift, five days a week.

All of Julian's hard work was recognized earlier this year when he was named Employee of The Month by his coworkers. This is an enormous accomplishment, and everyone at MERS Goodwill could not be more proud Julian is enjoying his new work environment and says he likes the longer breaks where he gets the time to eat and relax. These moments are what it is all about.

Michael

We worked diligently with Michael to find a position at an organization that fit his skills and personality.

Enter empower: abilities, a non-profit organization with the mission to remove barriers and empower independent living for all people with disabilities. Michael now thrives as the Front Desk receptionist at the empower: abilities office.

As a video editor I often say it's about making a person feel an emotion. If the person walked away without feeling any emotion whatsoever than not doing my job as an editor. What I'm currently working on at the moment is taking stories of when and how people became disabled and putting them in the video format. I job hunted for a year by myself. After that year I decided I needed help because I couldn't figure out why I wasn't getting any calls back or interviews. Turns out I had the education but I didn't have any job experience to my name and Cim [MERS Goodwill Employment Specialist Cim Holker] helped me realize that. So we did mock interviews and information interview. We put in for customer service type jobs when the editing jobs we're not biting.

My future goals right now are keep to working that nine to five as long as they will have me. One day I hope I can completely step away from customer service type positions and fully focus on video editing full time. My dream job would be to edit a Star Wars movies or TV shows but for right now I'm happy where I am.

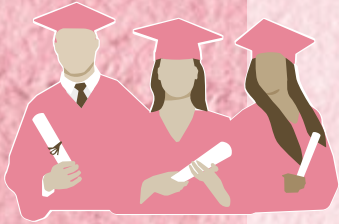

Brothers, Ricky and Ammon wanted to find a new opportunity where they could grow and learn together

Enter Newco Enterprises! In their new roles and with the support of their Employment Specialist, Ricky and Ammon feel comfortable and confident that they can successfully get the job done. They even got to start on the same day. We love our employer partners!

Newco actually cares how I am doing and what I am doing. I do not feel overwhelmed there. -Ricky

It's a friendly environment and I'm very thankful to have coworkers who help when I need assistance. -Ammon

EXCEL CENTERS

The Goodwill Excel Center Model

A number of the individuals we serve each year dream of doing jobs they are not presently qualified to do. They dream of going to college, no longer needing public benefits, and buying a house, but they feel stuck. There are over 500,000 Missourians without a high school diploma.

Our Goodwill Excel Centers meet with prospective students, age 21 and older, and discuss their barriers to obtain their diploma, work schedules, family responsibilities, past high school credits, career goals, and college aspirations. We look at high school transcripts to determine how many of the 24 credits required by Missouri Department of Elementary and Secondary Education (DESE) they have completed. We administer reading, math, writing, and vocational interest tests to determine the student's current skills and we develop a plan to help the student complete their high school education. Classes are taught by Missouri Certified Teachers, are classroom based, and students can sign up for as few as one class or as many as six classes per term. We are a year-round school with five terms of approximately eight weeks each. Classes are available in the morning, afternoon, and evening so that adults can attend school around their work and family responsibilities. We know that child care is one of the major barriers to completing school so we provide free childcare on site for children up to 12 years old.

New Leadership

MERS/Missouri Goodwill Industries names new superintendent for its adult high schools.

Dr. Eric "DK" Knost
Superintendent of Schools

MERS/Missouri Goodwill Industries Inc., one of the region's largest nonprofit organizations, has hired an educator well-known in the St. Louis area to oversee its four adult high schools.

In August, Dr. Eric Knost will take on the role of superintendent of MERS/Missouri Goodwill Excel Centers. Since 2019, Knost has served as superintendent of the Lewis Central Community School District in Council Bluffs, Iowa. Prior to taking that post, he was superintendent from 2014 to 2019 at St. Louis County's Rockwood School District, Missouri's third-largest district with 19 elementary schools, six middle schools, four high schools and two early childhood centers, as well as creative learning and independent learning centers. Knost also previously had been superintendent and deputy superintendent of the Mehlville School District in South St. Louis County.

"I have served throughout my career as an advocate to help all students thrive in this world," Knost said in a statement. "As I return home to Missouri, having the opportunity to continue my advocacy in a slightly different role seems absolutely perfect for my next chapter."

MERS Goodwill and The Excel Centers of Missouri are opening two new adult high schools. The new locations will be opening in Cape Girardeau and in Florissant, Missouri. Both locations are currently enrolling students for the new term to begin in January.

MERS Goodwill already operates four Excel Centers in Missouri, with locations in Springfield, St. Louis, Poplar Bluff, and Columbia. The Excel Centers are available free of cost to enrolled adults who wish to obtain their high school diploma with small class sizes, flexible schedules, and certification courses. The Excel Center offers students an actual diploma, not a GED or other equivalent.

Bill Determination

Bill exemplifies strength. Following an amputation and knee replacement surgery and while in the midst of a global pandemic, Bill was determined to return to the workforce. Now, with a strong and dedicated support system, a new job, and an amazingly positive attitude, Bill is committed to keep succeeding.

Bill was attending physical therapy with the support of his sister, Cindy, when he was referred to Missouri's Vocational Rehabilitation services. In September of 2020, a referral to MERS Goodwill Employment Services connected Bill with the South County Career Center Director, Leslie Quarles, as well as an assigned employment specialist. As with each new participant, the employment specialist worked with Bill to develop vocational goals and determine what his next steps would be on his path back to independence. MERS Goodwill worked with Bill on things like creating a resume that features his transferable skills and connecting him with area employers that might be a strong match for Bill's career goal and preferred environment.

Bill faced a few obstacles when it came to finding a job that suited his talents and his needs. The COVID-19 pandemic made it difficult to connect with his support community on a regular basis, including his team at MERS Goodwill. With Bill living in a care facility, extra precautions were put in place to protect his health and Cindy, Bill's devoted sister, focused on safely transporting him to and from his appointments with the employment specialist and to his job interviews. Equipped with masks, maintaining a safe distance, and holding meetings in an outdoor space, Bill was resolved to keep his progress on track.

Each participant with MERS Goodwill's Employment Services has individual needs and in Bill's case, he would need to find a job that was easily accessible by bus, as transportation was an issue. Bill and his support network were unwavering. With a bus map ready and his long-term goals in mind, Bill and his employment specialist continued submitting multiple job applications per week, looking for the perfect fit.

By 2022, Bill reported he has been able to reach all of the goals he set for himself in the beginning of his journey with MERS Goodwill Employment Services, and his hard work paid off. With the great position he found with CW Services, a federal contractor that handles custodial tasks onsite at the National Geospatial-Intelligence Agency (NGA), Bill was able to stop taking the bus and purchased his own truck.

New Leadership

Mark Arens
President & CEO

One Of The St. Louis Region's Largest Nonprofit Organizations Names New CEO

MERS/Missouri Goodwill Industries, one of the region's largest nonprofit organizations, has named Mark Arens as its new president and CEO, effective immediately. Arens succeeds David Kutchback, who died in February at the age of 70 after a more than 40-year career with the nonprofit.

During his tenure at MERS/Goodwill, Arens served as coordinator of evaluation and work adjustment and director of Lippman Center Services in his posts as vice president and executive vice president of programming since 2006. In 2018, he also was named superintendent of the Goodwill Excel Centers after MERS/Goodwill opened the first three of its now four adult high schools.

"Mark has achieved tremendous success during his 25-year career with the agency," George Phillips, board chairman, said in a statement. "We know he will continue to represent MERS Goodwill well as his contributions have meant so much to us, the staff and the community at large. He has great drive to grow the MERS Goodwill footprint and move our mission forward, changing lives through the power of work."

Arens first started working at MERS (Metropolitan Employment and Rehabilitation Services), in 1997 as a vocational counselor — before MERS merged with Goodwill to form the nonprofit that exists today. At the time, MERS/Goodwill had 17 retail locations and provided employment services in about 10 locations, officials said.

Arens has a bachelor's degree in psychology from Miami University of Ohio, a master's degree in rehabilitation counseling from Illinois Institute, and an MBA from Webster University. He has served as president and employment division chair of the Missouri Association of Rehabilitation Facilities and was part of the 2010-2011 Leadership St. Louis class and board member of the Maryville University Vocational Rehabilitation Program. Arens also served on the Webster Groves School Board Advisory Committee and as vice-chair of the Webster Groves School District Bond Campaign.
